

TERiX CEO SELECTED FOR BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Service Industry Association Has 200 Companies, 20,000 Members

SUNNYVALE, CA (March 12, 2009) – Bernd Appleby, who is CEO and President of TERiX Computer Service, has been selected to the Services Industry Association (SIA) Board of Directors. SIA is a non-profit association of enterprises involved in the support of high-technology products in the marketplace, represented by their top level executives, whose role is to promote the best possible range of alternatives & choices of services for those products, and support of the customers who use them.

"Service is not only the first word in our name, it's what we must continue to do better than anyone else, and that is Mr. Appleby's area of expertise," said SIA Executive Director Claudia Betzner. "Outstanding service and fair pricing will help the SIA capture value-minded customers, which is something TERiX has done worldwide in a very short timeframe with its message of Better Service, Better Value."

"SIA is entering a new era of cooperation, openness and user choices," Appleby said. "The worldwide economy is causing business to re-evaluate choices. Our goal is to ensure that SIA remains at the forefront of the new evolution of the service industry. During this critical time we want to learn from the past, manage for the present and plan for the future."

The 2009 SAI Summit is at the Mirage Hotel in Las Vegas March 29-31. The focus will be "Reinventing your Company for Smart Survival."
